To the glory of God and in loving memory of the Revd Henry William Buckley MA
For nearly sixty years Rector of this Parish who died 23rd November 1892 aged 92.

Do you recognise these words? They can be found on the stained glass window which was installed in 1903. We know from Parish Magazines of the time that Burlison & Grylls, were paid £106 for their work. The architect G F Bodley was paid eight guineas for "Designing and Supervising same".

Recently Peter Moore visited our church and spent some time recording and photographing the "very fine east window" for a catalogue of the work of his great grandfather's firm of Burlison & Grylls. The resulting photograph is available on the flickr photosharing website, at Peter Moore writes, "Here's a brief outline of great-grandfather's firm:

Burlison & Grylls, 1868-1953

John Burlison 1843-1891 and Thomas John Grylls 1845-1913 met as apprentices in the firm of Clayton & Bell, one of the largest and most 'commercial' of the Victorian stained glass window originators. Burlison's father was personal assistant to the architect Sir George Gilbert Scott, and his sister married Alfred Bell. Thomas Grylls' father was a manager for the organ builders Walker. In other words, both had promising connections, and these they exploited when, in 1868, with the encouragement of the architect G F Bodley, they set up their own stained glass firm off Oxford Street, London.

The consolidation of their partnership by John Burlison's marriage to Elizabeth Sarah Grylls in 1870, and the large families with which both were blessed are sufficient testimony to the success of the firm over the following decades. Most of their work appears to have come from the architects who were busy restoring the medieval parish churches scattered throughout England, G F Bodley, G E Street, Gilbert Scott father and son. As business expanded, they were able to undertake a variety of tasks involving restoration and decoration, mainly of chancel and sanctuary areas and often working to an architect's specifications, as well as gaining a reputation for good quality restoration of old glass and a delicate and restrained style in their own glass. From the early days John Burlison appears to have run the administrative side of the business: Thomas John Grylls was responsible for most of the designing, and appears to have gathered about him a small caucus of craftsmen, each with their own particular speciality, and eventually supplemented by his own talented children.

After Burlison's death in 1891, Grylls' eldest son Thomas Henry (Harry) took over the administration: himself talented as an heraldic artist, he was thus able to continue the firm after his father's death in 1913, though initially his designs leant heavily upon his father's tradition, and he responded particularly to the demand for war memorials. Latterly business declined, and the WW2 bombing of their Great Ormond Street premises effectively brought closure. To date, the work of Burlison & Grylls is largely undocumented: records appear to have been lost, and the windows were unsigned: thus an accurate and complete compilation is virtually impossible."
