CHURCHYARD WALLS

Bill and his son Stuart have started repairing the stone wall in the churchyard near to the field.

We know that the wall round the churchyard was built in 1796. This fact is mentioned in Thomas North's account of the Parish Records for Hartshorne, Derbyshire.

Over the years the wall has been repaired with cement mortar, not the best solution. The wall is actually two layers of stone with a cavity in between, capped with flat coping stones. The repairs will take some time to complete.

Have you noticed the tiny flowered plant growing in the wall next to the steps in Church Street? Pauline commented on this pretty flower last week and neither of us knew what it was called. Some detective work was called for! Thanks to Julie Berk¹ who has photographed and indentified all the weeds/wildflowers in her garden I was able to identify it as ...

Ivy-leaved Toadflax - Cymbalaria muralis

Did you know?

- It is said to have been originally introduced into England via seeds having been brought in some marble sculptures from Italy to Oxford. It has established itself on the walls of colleges and gardens in Oxford in such abundance as to give it the name "Oxford-weed".
- Ivy-leaved toadflax is thought to have been introduced into gardens prior to the 17th century and records from the wild date from 1640.
- The leaves are edible and have a flavour similar to watercress.
- The Latin name cymbalaria relates to the shape of the leaves, which were thought to resemble cymbals.
- It has a mechanism which makes it easy for the plant to colonise walls vertically upwards. When in bloom, the flower-stalks bend towards the light, whilst once the flowers are finished, the seed-heads bend the other way, so that seeds are more likely to be shed into cracks in the supporting stones.

Other common names include Mother of thousands, Travelling sailor, Kenilworth Ivy and Rabbit-flower.²

Amazingly, seeds can be bought for £1.99 for 23 seeds on ETSY!

He is Risen

Paul Baloche

Early morning break of dawn
 Stumbling to the tomb
 Standing awestruck wondering who
 Rolled away the stone
 And as the sun came up
 Amazed they looked inside
 A voice, an angel clothed in light
 Don't be afraid, He is alive!

He is risen
 Hallelujah, hallelujah
 Christ is risen
 Let the whole world sing
 Christ is risen
 Christ is risen from the dead

Sing, with all creation sing
 Of a world made new
 In His life we too may live
 Bursting from the tomb
 And looking up we see
 Our King enthroned on high
 His wounds of love now glorified
 Rejoice, for soon He'll burst the skies
